

Terms and Conditions

The Code Management Association, trading as the Electronic Commerce Code Management Association (ECCMA) is a not for profit membership association formed to develop and promote standards for data quality. The following terms and conditions apply to the goods and services offered by ECCMA.

Association membership: Membership in the association is effective from the receipt of membership dues and continues for a calendar year from the effective date. Membership fees are non refundable.

Certification fees: Fees due to the association for the verification of compliance with a standard are due at the time of application and are non refundable. Annual fees due for registration of a certificate are due on the anniversary of certification and are non refundable.

Training and conference fees: Fees due to the association for registration at a workshop or conference organized by the association are due at the time of registration. A proportion of the registration fees may be refundable in the event of the cancellation of a registration, such proportion and cancellation procedure are included in the event prospectus.

Contract labor: Fees due to the association for the provision of labor in the execution of a contract for services will be invoiced and are due within thirty (30) days of the date of the invoice.

January 1st 2009